Dear Professor Wang:

The Adjudicating Committee, with the concurrence of the Dean, has recommended that you receive tenure and be promoted to Associate Professor, Teaching Stream. The Senate Review Committee has concurred with this recommendation, noting that any procedural irregularities are not such that they could reasonably have affected the recommendation of the Adjudicating Committee.

I am happy to support the recommendation that you be promoted to Associate Professor, Teaching Stream, effective July 1, 2022. The evidence in the file demonstrates that you have met or exceeded the required qualifications in both teaching and service.

While some challenges were noted in terms of course workload that warrant reflection, substantial documentation supports the ranking of excellence in teaching, including comments by students, peer reviews, curriculum development, and leadership in chairing the Technology Enhanced & Active Learning (TEAL) Committee and the Learning, Curriculum & Students (LCS) Committee. Your teaching has been recognized with the Lassonde "Educator of the Year 2020" award as well as a 2021 President's University Wide Teaching Award nomination. You embrace innovation in technologies in course design and delivery, and you are committed to continuing professional development on effective design and course design. You also have a number of teaching-related publications. Your colleagues appreciate your significant service contributions.

Overall, the documentation in the file indicates that you are a superior teacher and a valued colleague, and I have no doubt that you will continue to contribute to the University. Congratulations on meeting this important milestone in your career.

Sincerely,
